

We are Competition Experts that bridge law and economics, academia and practice, as well as business and enforcement. Thanks to our solid academic backgrounds, experience in the European Commission, as well as training in EU Competition Law, we are able to place economic reasoning within the appropriate legal framework and communicate it effectively to legal counsel and regulators.

We trust in competition as a driver of innovation and improvement in consumer welfare. We believe in positive competition as a force that brings out the best in people, striving to constantly better themselves.

About the role:

As part of a “human scale” team, you will get the opportunity to make a significant difference in our casework from day one. As an intern, you will be involved in a variety of tasks to make genuine contributions to tackling clients’ challenges.

Your daily tasks will include:

- Conducting desk research on publicly available data and on recent literature;
- Drafting summaries and re-formatting of publicly available data;
- Drafting summaries of recent literature;
- Performing translations of documents and information sources;
- Assisting with data preparation;
- Performing data analysis;
- Taking part in internal and external development projects such as contributing to opinion pieces, conferences and workshops.

Who we look for:

- You enjoy working with people;
- You are passionate about economics;
- You love conceptual issues and working with data;
- You are ready to bring on board your excellent analytical skills and intellectual curiosity;
- You are able to propose creative solutions to complex challenges;
- You have a positive attitude to new tasks and learning;
- You are currently finishing an advanced university degree (Master’s degree) in Economics or related fields;
- You have an interest in competition economics and a good knowledge of theoretical and/or empirical microeconomics and industrial organization;
- You can draft and communicate effectively in English, in a clear and straightforward manner. A good knowledge of other languages is also an asset for our team because we handle cases in many jurisdictions;
- You can write simple codes in Stata and/or R that are self-explanatory and easy to follow;
- You have a positive can-do attitude and you are ready to actively engage with your colleagues.

What we offer:

- A unique opportunity to work with top international law firms, government bodies and academics on some of the most interesting cases of the time;
- We offer the opportunity to work with leading competition experts, with experience in handling stimulating and intellectually challenging casework from a wide range of practice areas;
- Challenging tasks that make a real contribution to competition cases and policy debates;
- The opportunity to work with an international team, with a broad range of backgrounds and experiences;
- A supportive, collaborative and inclusive team encouraging your valuable participation;
- You will be part of a young, motivated and inclusive team that takes pride in approaching cases with precision, creativity and know-how;
- A cheerful workplace based on respect, kindness and positive leadership;
- Opportunities to participate in training programmes, conferences and competition workshops;
- Remuneration during your internship and the prospect of future employment.

Interested?

If you are interested, please send your CV, cover letter, academic transcripts and a writing sample to careers@positivecompetition.com. Please, include the name and contact details of at least one referee.

For more information, do not hesitate to contact us at careers@positivecompetition.com and please visit our website at www.positivecompetition.com

We look for passionate, curious and resourceful minds! We look forward to having you on board.